Mayor Fulop Joins "Mayors for Climate" Coalition Following President Trump's Withdrawal from Paris Climate Agreement; 82 U.S. Mayors Pledge to Adopt, Honor and Uphold Paris Climate Agreement Goals

Cities and Local Communities have some of the greatest areas of impact and opportunity on climate change

JERSEY CITY – Mayor Steven M. Fulop announced today that Jersey City is one of more than 82 U.S. cities who have signed on with the Mayors for Climate coalition, representing 39 million Americans, to adopt, honor and uphold the goals set by the Paris Climate Agreement.

"While there is no doubt that the actions by the President are a step backward, Jersey City and cities across the country will continue to be leaders on climate change," said Mayor Fulop. "We have the ability at the local level and in cities to make significant impact in the area of climate change. In Jersey City, we will continue to invest in green infrastructure, clean energy, expanded open space and innovative ways to reduce our carbon footprint."
